OPEN 6 BIDS FOR FEDERAL SITE IN CITY

Bids for Location of Post Office Building Opened Monday

4 ON FRANKLIN-ST

Expect Inspector to Come To City

Six bids for the site on which to locate the new post office building in this city were opened in the office of the Treasury department in Washington, D. C., Monday morning and announced as follows:

Circle Realty Co., lots 368 and [illegible] and parts of lots 365, 366 and 367 on the north side of E. Franklin-st, for $35,000.

Circle Realty Co., lots 372, 373 and 374 on the north side of E. Franklin-st, for $16,000.

Dr. E. L. Price, lot 444 on the south side of E. Franklin-st, for $12,000.

Harden-Stevenson Co., lot 370 and part of lot 371 on the north side of E. Franklin-st, for $26,250.

Paul F. Hohen-Schleyer, parcel 148x198 feet at Court and Moundsts, for $23,000.

Fraternal Order of Eagles, parcel 113 feet on the south side of E. Main-st, for $15,500.

4 ON FRANKLIN ST.

Only two of the bids include land not located on Franklin-st adjacent to the sites of the present post office building owned by Denny Pickens.

The first bid of the Circle Realty Co., incl[illegible] t[illegible] present post office building, the garage building occupied by Ralph Leach and the Chinese laundry. The second bid of the Realty Co. includes that property directly opposite the fire department including parts of the C. K. Howard and R. R. Bales lots.

It is expected the post office department will send an inspector to the city as soon as convenient to study the sites offered and any that might be offered anytime before the contract for the purchase of the site has been signed. A provision in the treasury department says that with the opening of bids the effort to obtain a site will not end. It is possible the inspector may come here and observe a site he thinks would serve better than any offered and an effort to obtain that property will be made.

SCRAMBLE FOR POST

With the post office project now considered a sure thing the scramble for the local postmastership to succeed George P. Foresman who is expected to step aside when the administration changes March 4 will become hotter. A number of names are being circulated as seeking the appointment. Mr. Foresman's term does not expire until some time in December but since President Hoover does not leave office until March 4, the present postmaster may be reappointed. Whether or not the appointment will be affirmed depends largely upon the attitude of the Senate in voicing its approval or disapproval.

KILLED PARTNER

Only Gas Chamber in World Used

CARSON CITY, Nev., Nov. 28.—A whiff of hydrocyanic gas that savored of almond blossoms today legally took the life of John Hall, 57, alias Everett Mull, former Morgantown, N. C., contractor.

Hall was executed in Nevada's lethal gas chamber at the state prison here at 6:28 a. m. for the murder of his bootlegging partner, John T. "Hardrock" O'Brien at Las Vegas, Nev., June 15, 1931, in a quarrel over Mrs. Hall's affections and $686 whisky profits.

SMILES AT DEATH

After eating a hearty breakfast Hall walked steadily and smiling to the execution chamber as dawn broke over the Nevada desert.

Quickly the guards strapped him to the wooden chair and walked outside to join other witnesses who peered through a small glass window.

The lethal gas was turned into the airtight death room.

One whiff—and Hall slumped over in his chair. Physicians said that death was almost instantaneous.

Hall was the fifth man to be executed in the gas chamber, the only one of its kind in the world, since 1921.

OF RESPECTED FAMILY

Hall disappeared mysteriously from Morgantown, where he was a member of a respected family, four years ago following the death of his first wife.

HENRY FORD NOT OUT OF DANGER DOCTORS SAY; OPERATION SERIOUS

Condition is "Satisfactory," However, After Undergoing Operation for Strangulated Hernia and Appendicitis; Entire World Watches

DETROIT, Nov. 28. — Henry Ford is not yet out of danger but his condition is "satisfactory."

This was the information that came today from surgeons who Saturday operated on the 69-year-old motor magnate for strangulated femoral hernia and appendicitis.

Henry Ford

The operation, admittedly a dangerous one on a man of Ford's age, was performed Saturday afternoon as an emergency measure by Dr. Roy D. McClure, surgeon-in-chief of the hospital. The operation involved a four-inch incision. Dr. McClure yesterday said Ford's appendix had been removed in the course of it. This had not been mentioned before, he explained, because surgeons considered it a comparatively minor phase of the operation.

WIFE AT BEDSIDE

Mrs. Ford, the multimillionaire's companion in his rise from poverty to fabulous wealth and success, kept an all-night vigil at his bedside. To her came telegrams of sympathy and good wishes from the princes and rulers of the world. President Hoover, Premier Mussolini, King George V of England, and hundreds of others cabled their anxious hopes for Ford's safe recovery.

Newspapers, press associations and the hospital and motor company offices were beseiged all day and all night with telephone calls from all parts of the United States and the world. Foreign newspapers used transoceanic phones to inquire as to Ford's condition.

USE CENSORSHIP

Rigid censorship was in effect. Hospital attaches were under strict orders to refuse any information. All statements made by hospital officials were approved by W. J. Camerson, Ford public relations counsel, before being issued to the newspapermen who established a press headquarters in the hospital building.

This is Ford's first serious illness—at least so far as the public has ever known. His health has been remarkable. The only other time he was a patient in the hospital he supports was in 1927 when he was reported to have strained his back in an automobile accident.

NEW HOLLAND STORE BURNS LOSS $6,000

I. G. A. Store "Gutted"; All Goods and Fixtures Destroyed Sunday

FIREMEN LAUDED

Town Hall Threatened But Not Burned

Damage of $6,000 was estimated at New Holland, Sunday, when flames swept the store of the Independent Grocers' Alliance, operated by W. R. Griffith. The store building was completely gutted.

The origin of the fire remained a mystery today. Mr. Griffith says he "hasn't the slightest idea" how it started.

It was discovered at 6 a. m. Sunday by Wade K. Vincent when he started to open his filling station next to the store. He noticed flames and called the New Holland volunteer fire department. The fire-fighters hurried to the scene and prevented the flames from spreading. It was not long until the entire village was roused and at the fire.

BUILDINGS THREATENED

The Town Hall and the Vincent service station were threatened for a while but diligence of the fire department prevented any further blaze. Mr. Griffith and other New Holland citizens, were loud in their praise of the ability of the fire department. Mr. Griffith said the Town Hall and service station would certainly have been burned but for the work of the firemen.

This blaze is the first of any size the fire department has had to combat since a pumper was purchased over a year ago and a well dug near the center of the town. The fire department is a community project and proved its worth in this fire.

Fixtures and everything in the I. G. A. store were destroyed.

About This And That

BY THE SECOND GUESSER

NOTRE Dame's "Irish" are in the spotlight again—were they ever out of it?—and a number of sports scribes and those who placed their bets according to the deductions of these same writers are wondering just what made them think Army had an edge over the Anderson-men from South Bend * * * There was never a question of what the Ramblers would do to the Army after the first whistle * * * Emmitt Murphy, shock-troop quarterback, was running his team to perfection and it wasn't long until it was apparent that Army was due for a drubbing.

The Army can be glad several Notre Dame fumbles were made on the goalline and that several passes perfectly placed were dropped by the receivers.

The question of which is the stronger, college or professional football, has been receiving far more comment in late weeks than ever before * * * We believe the professional football teams stronger than the college teams. We'll take the word of three famous football men, the late Knute Rockne, Red Grange and Chick Meehan * * * Rockne, shortly before his tragic death is credited with declaring for the professional teams over college; Grange, the phantom of the gridiron at Illinois, says he didn't know a thing about football except to run until he started to play pro ball; Meehan, coach of Manhattan college, New York City, declares "The professional game starts where the college game leaves off."

Nothing more need be said concerning this argument * * * The best way to prove it would be to schedule some good college team against a professional team for charity * * * Green Bay, Portsmouth, Chicago Bears or New York Giants are considered the strongest professional teams.

BASKETBALL practice was to start in earnest at Circleville high school this afternoon with every man who expects to have a chance to make the grade appearing in uniform * * * Coach Pete Herberholz has a real task facing him this winter with only two lettermen, Bill Hegele and Dean White back in the fold.

ARMY-NAVY TILT ENDS EAST SEASON

NEW YORK, Nov. 28. — The Army-Navy game next Saturday will mark the close of the eastern football season, but it will also ring down the curtain on the gridiron careers of three gallant officers who will be transferred to other fields of activity immediately.

Major Ralph Sasse, Army coach; Major Phillip Fleming, director of athletics, and Captain Walter Wells, in charge of publicity, all wind up their West Point careers. Sasse, who is a cavalry officer, is to go to the war college. Fleming, an engineer, is to be transferred to the banks of the Mississippi, where he will utilize his talents in fighting floods, and Wells is to be stationed at Fort Leavenworth.

Sasse, despite the Notre Dame debacle on Saturday, has made a real reputation himself during the years he coached the Army team. Under him West Point attained a degree of efficiency it had never before attained and under him football at West Point was more than a game-it was an exercise in tactics and strategy which must have been of immense benefit to the Cadets who participated.

"IRISH" MEET SOUTHERN CAL.

Anderson Is Confident of Winning If Team Blocks Like Saturday.

NOTRE DAME UNIVERSITY, Ind., Nov. 28.—With the din of an uproarious welcome still ringing in their ears, Notre Dame's conquering football heroes turned their faces westward today and settled down to the serious task of preparing for their last game of the season with the University of Southern California.

Coach Hunk Anderson could not conceal his elation over the Ramblers' startling 21 to 0 victory Saturday over the army. But, he struck a note of discretion admist all the wild celebrating by predicting that the Southern California battle at Los Angeles December 10 will prove an imposing struggle.

COMMUNITY OUT

The Irish coach and squad were the objects of a frenzied ovation when they arrived here yesterday afternoon. Virtually the entire student body of 2,700 undergraduates and 15,000 South Bend residents turned out at the railway station to give the gridders a noisy welcome.

Anderson said work will begin at once to devise a defense against Howard Jones' national championship Trojans.

"Southern California will use ten formations from which it can run an unlimited number of plays," said the coach. "I am sure that our defense will be harder to teach than for any other game we have played this fall."

He praised the effective blocking of his lads against the cadets and intimated he is confident of victory over U. S. C., if the Ramblers produce as good a performance in that department on December 10.

COLUMBUS, Nov. 28.—Ten Ohio State university athletes laid away their moleskins and donned trunks today as the Buckeye basketball squad launched serious practice for the first game of the season a week from tomorrow night.

Led by Lew Hinchman, captain of the Ohio State football team, the gridiron squad joined Coach Harold G. Olsen's basketball outfit, which has been practicing quietly throughout the football season, and prepared to take over several regular positions.

Blackie Conrad of Wooster, Johnny Fugitt of Portsmouth and Captain Hinchman are the football players who have earned basketball letters in the past. All are expected to be in the lineup when the Bucks play at Toledo university on Dec. 6 and when they meet Ohio Wesleyan here on Dec. 10.

Marshall Oliphant, the substitute Buckeye quarterback, is one of the footballers who transferred their activities to basketball. Others are Rosequist, Cox, Thies, McAfee, Scott and Padlow.

Besides Conrad, Fuggitt and Hinchman, Ohio State has five other basketball lettermen back on the squad this year. Howard Mattison, guard, of Erie, Pa., is captain, and others are Brown, Colburn and Lively, all of Dayton, and Fisher of Cleveland, Wendt of Middletown, Beitner and Lowe of Dover, and Bishop of Eryan are others on the roster.

Ohio State opens its Big Ten season against Indiana here on Jan 7.

FAVOR MICHIGAN

PASADENA, Cal., Nov. 28. — The Rose bowl committee by tonight was expected to invite an eastern or southern team to play the University of Southern California Trojans in the annual Rose Bowl football game Jan. 2.

Teams under consideration were Michigan, Colgate, Pittsburgh and Auburn (Alabama Poly.)

Michigan remained first choice. The committee honed the "Big Ten" would waive its rule against post-season games and allow their champions to participate. Colgate, with an unbeaten eastern record, was favored by many western fans.

NEW HOLLAND TEAMS SPLIT

Basketeers Divide Double Bill With Kingston A. C. Friday Evening.

New Holland's independent basketball teams, boys and girls, went out of the county Friday evening to win and lose to the Kingston A. C. teams by scores of 39-31 and 15-17 respectively.

New Holland was unable to stop Simon Buckwalter for the Kingston team from scoring 16 points but he did not receive enough help from his mates. New Holland's scoring was divided between J. Vincent, Funk and Timmons with 10, 12 and 10 points, respectively.

The girls game was hard fought with New Holland holding an 11-5 edge at the half. They went scorless in the third period though to lose their advantage.

Johnny Heiskell refereed both games.

SELL SEALS TO GOVERNOR WHITE

Frances Spiers and Tommy Weiner, Columbus youngsters got a big thrill when they sold Governor George White the first sheet of Christmas health seals, Friday morning, as he was leaving the mansion for the executive offices.

The governor's purchase officially opened the twentysixth annual seal sale which will be conducted throughout the state until December 24. The children are dressed to represent the carolers pictured on the 1932 seal.

Over a hundred million health stickers have been distributed to public health leagues and Christmas seal committees in all parts of the state by the Ohio Christmas Health Seal Committee of which John A. Elden, Cleveland, former state commander of the American Legion, is chairman.

Through the sale of these seals the committee hopes to raise $250,000 with which to combat tuberculosis, according to Elden.

Popular Columbia Law Professor, Who Was President-Elect's Right Hand at Debt Parley, Is Authority on Government from All Angles

PROF. RAYMOND MOLEY

Although he has already been dubbed as "Roosevelt's Colonel House" by the not-so-well-informed who keep an eye on affairs in the national capital, Professor Raymond Moley, who served in the capacity of adviser to President-Elect Franklin D. Roosevelt at the debt parley with President Hoover, is as different from the Wilsonian strategist as chalk is from the proverbial cheese. While Colonel Edward House has been credited by would-be biographers with being the influence behind many of the late President Wilson's policies—a kind of power behind the throne, as it were—Moley is merely serving the President-elect in the capacity of a human cyclopaedia of knowledge pertaining to economics and other prime factors that go to make good government. Professor Moley, who occupies the chair of public law at Columbia University and Barnard College, is a mine of information on these subjects. It was he who supplied the data used in the Roosevelt speeches during the campaign. In 1928 he performed a similar service for Alfred E. Smith. The professor is also an authority on crime and justice, having authored several books on these subjects, among them: "Politics and Criminal Procedure," "Our Criminal Courts" and "Tribunes of the People." He began his career as a school superintendent in Olmstead Falls, O., was a high school teacher in Cleveland, an assistant professor in Western Reserve University, and has been on the Columbia faculty since 1923.

SCOTTISH POACHERS HYPNOTIZE ANIMALS

INVERNESS, Scotland — "Mechanized poaching" on deer is a new and mysterious form of racketeering which is flourishing at present in the Scottish forests.

The poachers choose a dark night, and travelling in a high-powered lorry, they select a lonely part of the woods. With a strong headlight they hypnotize their victim which is unable to tear away from the bright glare. Then one of the gang creeps up behind the deer and knocks it on the head with a club.

Unlucky Exceed Lucy

THOUGH there is now about $9,000,000,000 worth of gold in the possession of civilized man, it is generally accepted as a fact that the gold that has been taken from the earth is not worth what has been spent in its pursuit.

Many men have devoted lifetimes to searching for "pay dirt," but how many fortunes can be traced back to the lucky strike of some suffering prospector? Innumberable shafts have been sunk in lonesome mountainsides without finding yellow ore. He who wanders among the solitudes of the Rockies is quite likely to encounter the scars left on hillsides and in the gullies by prospectors who have worked claims that never produced.

Claims that proved bonanzas were few and far between. It was only the occasional strip of sand that yielded its yellow dust profitably, and in most cases even it was soon exhausted. On the whole, more has been spent in the quest of gold than was ever realized from it.

In this respect speculation and other forms of gambling are like prospecting for gold. The losses always exceed the winnings. Fabulous seem the winnings in the great lotteries of Europe, but the money that goes into them far exceeds that which comes out in prizes. Fortunes were made in the stock boom and for every fortune won many fortunes were lost.

Tramps and Beggars

AN American authoress once ironically described tramps as "our leisured class." The world has never known such prosperity as that of the United States in recent years, yet no one can now have the experience of the man who traveled a thousand miles through the American Colonies without meeting a vagrant.

But the American tramp is seldom a professional like his idle brethern in England and on the Continent. Often he graduates from the exposure and hazards of the road to the ranks of honest toil. Hardly ever is he down and out.

America has never been troubled with beggers and vagabonds to the extent that Asia and Europe have been since the beginning of recorded times. Elizabethan laws grouped them as vagabonds, strolling players, soothsayers, wandering scholars, masterless men, gypsies, quacks, fenders and bear leaders. A sixteenth century historian listed twenty-five organized orders of knaves or mendicants in England with a membership of 10,000.

Asia, Europe and Northern Africa are overrun with begging fakirs who would not be tolerated in the United States. For Americands two flies in the ointment of foreign travels are the tip grabbers and alms-seekers.

That the business concerns of your city can meet your every requirement.

They take great pride in their ability to fill your orders and assure you prompt service.

When you buy from them you see what you buy and get it right now.

Your local dealers fully realize that their success depends upon satisfied customers and they make every effort to give you the quality and service that is necessary to keep you satisfied.

When you buy at home you see what you buy and take it home with you. If not as represented, you get quick adjustment.

When you buy from a peddler or a catalogue you get, some day, what they send you—maybe you will like it and maybe you won't.

If you investigate you will find you can get more for your dollar at home than you can elsewhere.

LOCAL MERCHANTS OFFER YOU BETTER QUALITY AT BETTER PRICES.

MERCHANDISE BOUGHT IN THE HOME CITY NOT ONLY REPRESENTS "GOOD BUYS" FROM THE STANDPOINT OF VALUE RECEIVED BUT THERE IS STILL GREATER VALUE IN THE FACT THAT YOU HAVE KEPT THE MONEY AT HOME WORKING FOR THE HOME CITY.

CHAPTER THIRTY-THREE

He got up and began striding about the room. She made no effort at elaboration. Finally he stopped in front of her, hands thrust in pockets, legs apart.

"Pat has told you?" His fair face was darkened by shamed blood.

"No. Did you expect that?"

"Yes, I rather did. She's so forthright and——"

He turned back to his chair and slumped down, elbows on knees, head in hands. "Well, I thought she might." He did not lift his head.

"Perhaps she was leaving that for you to do. Though I've no doubt she would have, some time," the indolent voice went on. "Some girls might keep such a thing—girls who haven't been brought up to believe sneaking a nasty business belonging to the worm species," she added, recalling Pat's indignation over his effort to hide her from Jack.

Warren lifted his head. "Pam, I'm a beast and a darned rotter; but I couldn't harm that child. Even if I've thought I could, I couldn't. You believe that, don't you?"

"Then was it your idea to divorce me and marry her?" she said flecking the ash from her cigarette, eyes covered.

"Ye gods, Pam! Such a thought never entered my mind. How could you think of such a thing?"

"I've no doubt that's what she expects. Knowing Pat as I do, I'm sure of it." She held him in steady regard. "In fairness to her as well as to me, Jimmie, I think you had better make that trip. If you don't, we're all going to be plunged into a scandal. Arthur Savage is a fool. He's likely to do something spectacular. Jack Laurence isn't a fool. And he's making it his business to look after Pat until her father arrives. I think you may safely turn your charge over to him. He won't make a fool of himself, nor a fool of the rest of us; but I don't think he'll brook any nonsense. He's frightfully in love with her—and unselfishly. He could give her up for her happiness. But he isn't going to submit to seeing her reputation ruined. Such matters may be carried on in New York, but not here. Besides all this, I think she should be allowed to choose between you and Cousin John without influence from you."

"Choose between her father and me!"

"Certainly. That's what it comes to."

Rising, she went on wearily, "If she elects to go to New York to live, it will be for one reason. You can't expect Cousin John to countenance that by going with her. If she goes, she leaves him to go to you. I think she should be left to make so important a decision on her own—unbiased by your presence."

He stood up. "I'll go, of course. Tomorrow morning." He caught her hand. "Pam." His blue eyes held her pleadingly. "Pam," he repeated, voice breaking, unable to go on.

Horror swept her. Was he going to cry? He mustn't. She couldn't bear it if he were to give way. Wrong, sinning against her, wounding her as only a loved one can wound, she ached in every fibre of her for him. She could not bear to think of him fighting it out alone. She wanted to assure him of her forgiveness and sympathy. She blamed Pat now. . . . Bitterly, furiously.

He looked so humble, his eyes pleaded like a little boy's eyes. She wanted to throw her arms around him, to crush his big sandy head to her breast and tell him she loved him and still believed in him. But pride lashed her. He had hurt, humiliated her, outraged her love. Drawn her into the degrading situation of discussing his desire for another woman.

"Good night, Jimmie," she said, withdrawing her hand.

And now she had closed the door. Having done it, how, oh, how, could she open it?

When she reached the door, he called, "Pam."

She turned. He had dropped back into his seat, a big figure of utter dejection. And Pamela knew that whatever his feeling for Pat, he still loved her. She went out closing the door behind her.

At the clicking of that latch Warren sprang up as at a sound of a shot in the room. He crossed swiftly, but as he reached for the knob his hand fell to his side. He stood there staring at the door as at the face of death, all color, all life drained from his face. And beyond it stood Pamela, also stricken by that clicking latch.

The scene of their first quarrel rose before her. It had taken place in his room. A wild and bitter lover's quarrel which sent her slamming out, telling him she was through with him forever. But she had not closed the door behind her. And later that night he had come in to find her curled up in a big chair, weeping silently. He had called himself all sorts of a brute.

"Oh well," he laughed when she later reminded him that just the same she hadn't come to him, "you invited me to come. You left the door open to let me know I'd be welcome."

After that, no matter how violently they quarreled, neither of them, on leaving the other, ever closed the door.

"If either one ever does close it," she had said gaily one day, "the other will know that's the end. We won't be brutal and say it; but if either of us gets fed up—we'll let the closed door say it."

And now she had closed the door.

The action had been involuntary. But having done it, how—oh, how could she open it? This quarrel was different from those mad first year lover's quarrels. This was fundamental. Striking not only at her pride, but at the very roots of their marriage. To open that door, after having closed it, would be to proclaim the fact that she was waiting to forgive him for his infidelity; that he could with impunity hurt her at will, humiliate her before the world, and that he had but to accept the invitation of that open door and be forgiven.

And yet, if she didn't open it—wouldn't he take it that she was through? Well—was it her place to make the first move? He, not she, was the offender. Let him open it. Let him suffer something of the humiliation he had given her. Oh, if only she hadn't closed it! And yet, why not? Was she not justified in being through? Was it not for him to come all the way to win her forgiveness?

There they stood, one on each side of the door. One too proud to turn that knob; the other two humbly afraid.

"So she's through," thought Warren bitterly. "That was to be the sign. Well, she's right. I've forfeited all right to her love."

Slowly he turned away. Patricia wiped from his mind by the tumult produced in him by a closed door.

"Well, I won't insult her by forcing myself on her, and making her say it in words."

Pamela turned away, hoping he would not take her gesture as final, but would give her a chance to forgive him, and at the same time preserve her woman's pride.

She flung herself on her bed and wept as she had not wept in years.

Warren drew up a chair and sat down. His thoughts scuttled this way and that like new born kittens, primitive, driven by hunger, seeking sustenance, and blind; groping, falling one over another, without sense of direction. The dancing in the ballroom down stairs ceased. Hours fell into infinity.

He felt as if great horses had been hitched to his four limbs and started in opposite directions, pulling him violently apart. He acknowledged Pam's right to close the door between them. Fool that he had been not to realize that she was aware of his deceit, which he had fondly believed none suspected. Why even Mr. Braithwait had seen. Perhaps the whole colony knew. And he, Warren had been credited with brains. That Pam could possibly love him enough to forgive him was to his mind beyond possibility.

It Was Ever Thus!

Diet Knowledge Ended Old-Fashioned Scurvy

This Disease, Once So Common and Dreaded in the Days of Long Sea Voyages, Still Exists, But in Mild Form

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York. Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

EVERYBODY should have a hobby. One of my friends has an odd one—collecting old books about sailing vessels. In glancing over some of these, I was impressed by the many references to what used to be a dreaded disease, scurvy. It was most common in the days of long sea voyages. With a shortage of fresh vegetables and fruits, scurvy was sure to afflict the sailors.

Dr. Copeland

But today such a voyage can be taken without fear of scurvy. Modern methods of refrigeration and our present knowledge concerning vitamins and nutrition have done away with the danger of this disease.

Scurvy still exists but it takes a mild form. It is rarely seen in the old-fashioned acute form.

A "Deficiency Disease"

Scurvy is called by the doctors a "deficiency disease". That is, there is something missing in the diet. It is the lack of vitamin C that results in the symptoms of this ailment.

Vitamin C is found in fresh fruits, especially the citrus fruits, such as oranges, lemons and grapefruit. It is also found in fresh vegetables, like lettuce, cabbage and tomatoes. Because these foods will prevent scurvy, they are called "anti-scorbutic" foods. It isn't necessary to take a lot of the given food. It has been shown that the juice of one orange or of one tomato, taken daily, will prevent scurvy in an adult.

But this vitamin aids in promoting health in other ways. It increases our resistance to infections.

When there is a lack of vitamin C there probably will not be an acute attack of scurvy, as I have said, but the absence of "pep" is noted. Continued deficiency of vitamin C causes pains in the joints. These symptoms may be mistaken for rheumatism or arthritis.

General Fatigue

In a severe case of scurvy, the skin assumes a peculiar pallor. The gums are swollen and the teeth become sensitive and loose. There is mental and physical fatigue. The appetite is lacking. There is a general "run down" condition.

Most of us are familiar with the value of fresh fruits and vegetables. Yet how many of us neglect to include these important food substances in the daily diet. The fresh products of garden and orchard are within the reach of everyone. It is a mistake not to eat them.

The citrus fruits are among the most valuable of the anti-scorbutics. They should be given to infants, as well as to older children and adults. Strained orange juice may be given to an infant as early as the third month.

Scurvy is a preventable disease. Since certain foods protect you against this disease, include them in your daily diet.

If your children do not progress in school as they should, if they fail to cut good teeth and to possess the normal energy, you may suspect what we call "hidden scurvy". Correct the diet and all will be well.

NEWS of the... American Legion

CARRYING ON FOR WORTHY PRINCIPLES

There is no organization with higher ideals or stronger purposes than The American Legion. Composed as it is of the patriotic minded men and women who bore arms in the defense of their flag and country, the Legion is today pledged to a program of usefulness and service which commands the deepest respect and the wholehearted admiration of the American public. The men who marched away to war returned to civilian life with a rekindled love for their land, appreciating the fact that solemn obligations and responsibilities rested upon them as individual citizens. In furtherance of the objective for which they fought, these men organized The American Legion as the vehicle to put their programs into practical operation.

The principles of the Legion, its ideals and purposes, are beautifully expressed in the preamble to the Legion Constitution which is herewith quoted.

"To uphold and defend the Constitution of the United States; to maintain law and order; to foster and perpetuate a 100 per cent Americanism; to preserve the memories and incidents of our association in the Great War; to inculcate a sense of individual obligation to community, state and nation; to combat the autocracy of both the classes and the masses; to make right the master of might; to promote peace and good will on earth; to safeguard and transmit to posterity, the principles of Justice, Freedom and Democracy; to consecrate and sanctify our comradeship by our devotion to mutual helpfulness."

Dedicated to endeavors of such a worthy character, The American Legion extends to every World War veteran the opportunity to become associated with his comrades in an unselfish program of service to the nation and its people. It was an honor to march behind the flag in 1917 and 1918 and it should likewise be an honor for veterans to continue to serve in time of peace. Every one of the ten principles set forth in the preamble of the Legion Constitution provides a splendid reason why ex-service men should support the Legion through their individual memberships. Working through the organized medium afforded by The American Legion, the collective efforts of veterans will be rewarded with noble results.

NEW KIND OF HERO

PEIPING—The Hopan Provincial authorities were presented with a knotty problem by residents who petitioned the government to praise the filial conduct of Chen Ching-han for cutting off two slices from his arm to help his aged mother recover from a serious illness. Such a work of merit not being covered by the regulations, the petition was refused.

MOVIES

AT THE CLIFTONA

Tallulah Bankhead and Robert Montgomery are the interesting personalities about whom the story of "Faithless," now showing at the Clifton a Theatre, revolves today and Tuesday.

The brilliant and thoroughly individual Miss Bankhead has a vehicle worthy of her talents in this timely drama of an heiress whose world falls about her when the economic depression puts an end to her luxurious existence. Forced to stand on her own feet at last, for the first time in her pampered life, she battles with courage and resourcefulness out of chaos.

Robert Montgomery

Montgomery is excellent as the man whose fortitude in the face of obstacles helps Miss Bankhead to regain her emotional balance. Worthy support is given the two stars by Hugh Herbert, Maurice Murphy, Louise Closser Hale and others. The discerning direction of Harry Beaumont also contributes to making "Faithless" an effective piece of screen entertainment.

AT THE GRAND

"Extra!"—those workers in the movies who are always so near and yet so far from the spotlight and the big money workers in "American Madness," Columbia's dramatic production, featuring Walter Huston, experienced a vicarious thrill handling more than $5,000,000 of stage money and seven-figure checks that were almost good. The picture is showing at the Grand Theatre.

Wrapped in the same packages that the United States treasury in Washington sends to banks all over the country, the money was brought on the set in six different denominations, ones, fives, tens, twenties, fifties and hundreds. Little. The wrappers were obtained from the Bank of America in Los Angeles after they had been removed from real money.

Others in the cast of "American Madness" includes Kay Johnson, Pat O'Brien, Constance Cummings and Gavin Gordon. It's a Frank Capra production.

DIRTY SHIRTS ARE FORGERY EVIDENCE

WICHITA, Kan. — Local detectives, after receiving a hot tip from Hutchinson police, were all set to capture a bond forgery ring together with the evidence necessary to convict, and their reward for their pains was a couple of dirty shirts.

The police had been notified by their Hutchinson, Kan., contemporaries that three members of a forgery ring were on a plane bound for Wichita and gave descriptions were given. The bonds would be split up as the information said.

The capture was made and the grips, supposedly containing copies of the bonds were examined and found to contain the week's washing. [illegible] apologies from [illegible] three traveling salesmen and their rounds.

There are many puzzled, tired brains and much talk among our country's leaders, all trying to solve the problems of the times We hope they may get somewhere some day, for many millions of people are waiting for more action and less talk.

The gloomy philosophers of a past generation, having achieved something like classic rank in the respect that well read people have been supposed to know something about them, go in and out of fashion as do other semi-permanent schools of thought. At present they seem to be out of fashion, but it seem to be more interested in the narrower matters of politics and economics.

Good advertising commands attention and helps to sell that which is advertised.

The application of unpractical theories in the present economy wave may do more harm than good.

A city should make street crossings safe for pedestrians as well as motorists.

Ability plus tact, plus cleverness, plus honesty make success, and that is what we are all striving for.

Some men think they know it all, but do they?

Business men must think in the days of today and tomorrow — not in the days of yesterday.

Experience teaches a lot of people things they should know.

Most business concerns advertise in the newspapers because they believe in the merchandise they have for sale and want others to do the same.

Native Film Stars Head List For Meritorious Achievement

* * * * * *

Foreign Stars Eclipsed by Home-Grown Products in Annual Accolade of Academy of Arts and Sciences Goes to Helen Hayes and Frederic March.

FREDERIC MARCH

FRANK BORZAGE

In recognition of meritorious achievement in the motion picture world, the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences recently bestowed its traditional gold statuettes upon an illustrious few at its annual banquet in Hollywood. To Helen Hayes went the palm for the best performance of an actress during 1932 for her work in "The Sin of Madelon Claudet," hailed by the critics as one of the year's outstanding pictures. Miss Hayes is a product of the American stage, having appeared before the footlights for eighteen years before she attained stardom in the films. She began her career as an actress at the age of seven. The leader among the male actors, Frederic March, is also an American, a native of Racine, Wis. March, a graduate of the University of Wisconsin, is that rara avis, a banker who turned thespian. Though not nominally a star, March is considered by many critics as being head and shoulders above the rest of the crop of luminaries at Hollywood. He won recognition from the Academy for his portrayal of the dual role of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, in the film of that name. Frank Borzage, named as the year's best director, is a native of Salt Lake City, the son of a wealthy rancher. He is the youngest of Hollywood's ace directors. Borzage has been on the stage and in the films since he was thirteen. His direction of the picture "Bad Girl" won him the academy award. This picture was listed among the six leading movies of the year.
